

JENNA'S STORY

Jenna's journey started in June of 2009 when she nervously told us she was losing control of motion in her left hand and leg. After seven doctors, many MRI's, and one brain biopsy, on October 21, 2009 Jenna was told she had anaplastic astrocytoma; brain cancer.

Though becoming weaker as every month passed, Jenna continued to work as assistant director at Rogy's New Generation Learning Center. As she got worse they told her she only needed to work 3 hours a day and now, finally, as she cannot move without assistance and a wheelchair and cannot see or speak clearly, Jenna has now stopped working.

At the beginning of September Jenna had her twenty second MRI and was told that the cancer has spread to other areas of her brain and into her brain stem.

Jenna asked "What's the next treatment we try"? She will not quit fighting this disease.

Unfortunately, her insurance will run out soon and until she recovers she will not be able to return to work. Jenna has made it this far both emotionally and physically because of the support from all her family and friends and now she is in need of a little more help.

We ask you to join us for Let It Be....for Jenna's FUN RUN/WALK at Hammel Woods on November 6, 2010.
